SENATE APPROVAL EXPECTED

By JAMES GOODWIN

As the Supreme Court of the United States again ruled in favor of civil rights, a Negro man was named to the high court.

The Senate has approved the appointment of William J. Brennan Jr., a junior associate justice, to fill the seat vacated by William O. Douglas.

Brennan, a 44-year-old attorney, was appointed to the high court by President Richard Nixon.

The appointment was confirmed by the Senate with a vote of 91-4.

Brennan, who has been a law professor at the University of Virginia for the past 10 years, will now be a member of the Supreme Court.

He replaces Justice William O. Douglas, who recently announced his retirement at the age of 77.

DOUGLAS NAMED TO SUPREME COURT

Brennan is a native of New York City, where he was born.

He attended the City College of New York, where he received his B.A. degree in 1951.

In 1953, he received his law degree from the University of Virginia.

Brennan has been a professor at the University of Virginia since 1957.

He has also served as a law clerk for Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black.

He is married to the former Elizabeth Blackwell, who is also a law professor at the University of Virginia.

The couple has two children.

Brennan’s appointment was confirmed by the Senate with a vote of 91-4.

He will take his seat on the court when the session begins in October.

The Senate’s approval of Brennan’s appointment comes as a welcome development for civil rights advocates.

In recent years, the Supreme Court has taken steps to ensure that civil rights are upheld, including the landmark Civil Rights Act of 1964, which banned discrimination based on race, color, national origin, sex, or religion.

The appointment of Brennan, who is widely respected for his commitment to civil rights, is expected to further strengthen the court’s reputation for upholding civil liberties.

L.A. COUNCIL FLIPS LOUSY DECISION

By JIMMY JOHNSON

The Los Angeles City Council has reversed its earlier decision to allow the construction of a new high-rise apartment building in the Central Los Angeles area.

The council voted unanimously to reverse the decision on Tuesday, reversing its decision on Monday.

The new building, which is proposed for the site of the former Union Oil Company building, is expected to house about 1,000 people.

The council’s decision was based on concerns about the impact on traffic and the environment.

The council also expressed concern about the potential for increased crime in the area.

The earlier council vote was 8-1, with Councilman Ernie Lopez voting in opposition.

Councilman Lopez, who represents the area, said the new building would cause too much traffic and pollution.

The council’s reversal comes as a relief to many residents who had expressed concern about the project.

The project is expected to begin in early 2017.
